HAWAII MOTOR SUPPLY CO. IS INCORPORATED

With a capital stock of $100,000, three-fourths of which has already been subscribed, the Hawaii Motor Supply Company, Limited, has filed corporation papers at the territorial treasury. The papers were filed last week.

Officers of the new firm are as follows: J. F. C. Hagans, president; Albert Horner, vice-president; William Williamson, auditor; L. J. Warren, secretary; Robert C. Walker. The corporation states its object as general manufacturing, merchandise and commission business in the territory.

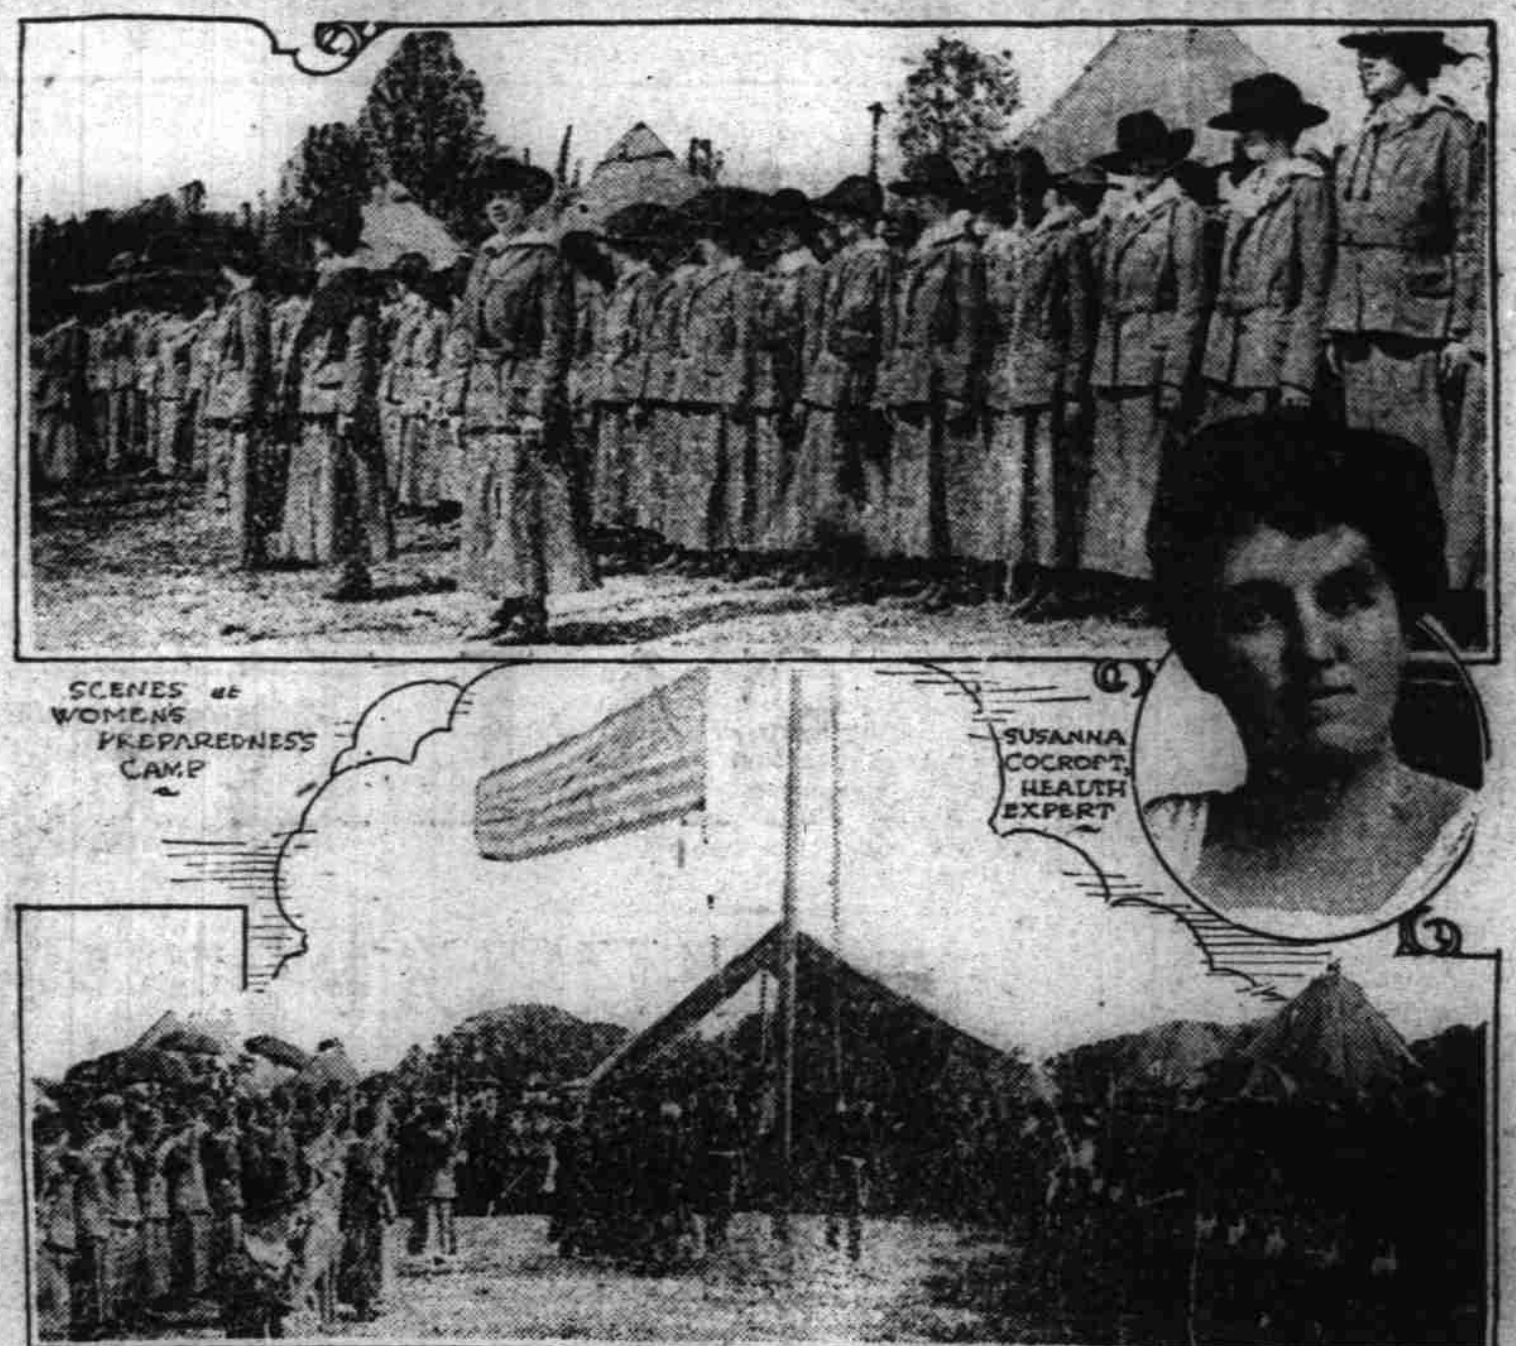

It has a total of 1000 shares which are valued per at $100 and 750 have been paid in. L. J. Warren, secretary, told the Star-Bulletin yesterday that the company has not decided what agency it will accept or what place it will choose for location of its shop. There is a rumor that the old National theater site may be chosen for it.

PROMOTION COMMITTEE TO HAVE BULLETIN BOARD

Plans have been made by Albert P. Taylor, secretary of the Hawaii Promotion Committee to install a new announcement board at the entrance of the office of the committee on Bishop street. A large board will be erected which will carry all announcements of sporting events, pageants and other news of interest to the general public. So many calls have been received regarding certain events that are being staged that the committee has decided that the announcement board will fill a long felt want. Included on the list of information to the general public will be the steamship arrivals and time of departure of all vessels. It is expected that the board will be ready for use by the latter part of the week.

TENT LIFE IN TRAINING CAMPS TO MAKE MORE CAPABLE WOMEN

The woman's training camp idea, rapidly gaining popularity in the United States, received new impetus this week. At the woman's training camp just opened in Washington, where are gathered women from all over the country, Mrs. George Pewsey, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Gibson Fahnestock, Mrs. F. F. Fletcher and Mrs. Hugh L. Scott, wife of General Scott now conferring with the Mexicans, were prominent participants.

The President of the United States was present on the opening day and addressed the camp. On this occasion Mrs. Scott, Mrs. Barnett and Mrs. Fletcher, representing the army, marine corps and navy, respectively, "informed" the ladyranks and hauled the stars and stripes to the top of the flagstaff.

The physical side of the training camp idea is strongly emphasized in the "national capital camp." Susanna Cooch, the noted health expert, of Chicago, an enthusiastic supporter of the camp idea, was one of the prominent women invited to talk to the "dimpled rookies." "I believe in training camps for women," she said, "not because I believe that these will be put to the actual test of war. I hope that this war in Europe will teach us a lesson and that we will never have another. But because I believe every mother's son and daughter will be a better man and a better woman if they will give their time and thought and energy for a certain period of their lives, be it six months or a year, to something outside of their personal interest."

"We of America, our snug self-complacency, have become too self-centered, preoccupied by other than self-interest. The conservation of our army, marine corps and navy, respectively, "informed" the ladyranks and hauled the stars and stripes to the top of the flagstaff.

The physical side of the training camp idea is strongly emphasized in the "national capital camp." Susanna Cooch, the noted health expert, of Chicago, an enthusiastic supporter of the camp idea, was one of the the many as above the good of the means to build character. It means a broader self and it means the making of men and women. "To live in tents means to appreciate the value of fresh air. The physical training means the summing up of minor ailments; it means a recognition of physical conquests over the physical self; it means better health, strength and vitality, and the power of resistance. All of these work for the greater good to the individual and to the nation."

"I should like to see a certain portion of every life given to active work, not idleness, in camp life under direct and definite training. "Such training, such conservation, would make us realize broader issues; would awaken us to our own and our nation's possibilities. Life, as we came from these camps, would take on a different aspect, greater freedom and greater enjoyment."

"We talk much of self-development through unselfishness, but we do not put our ideas into actual practice."

FARRAR DRAMA CLOSING TONIGHT

Geraldine Farrar leaves Honolulu tonight. Her latest vehicle, "Temptation," while not an opera, still deals with the life work of this great prima donna, being the story of a young girl who would face an opera audience and relating the temptations that are thrown in the path of the unsophisticated girl who endeavors to reach the opera house through the stage entrance.

Rene Dupree (Farrar) is gifted with an exceptionally good voice, she studies long and hard and is ready to make her debut, but learns that there are requisites other than a good voice that are demanded by the impresario. The girl refuses to comply with the demands of Otto Muller (Theodore Roberts), manager and producer, and her operatic career stops. Finally she decides that she must pay the price and is about to do so when Julien, a young and promising writer, puts in an appearance and intervenes.

BETTY NANSEN IN TRYING PART

Denmark's famous dramatic artist, Betty Nansen, continues to score heavily as a leading star of the Fox Film Corporation and her latest gift to the screen, "Should a Mother Tell," is a photo-play with an angle entirely different to anything she has previously appeared in and in fact to the usual run of picture dramas. Betty Nansen appears as the mother who is compelled to choose between her daughter and an innocent man. Should she sacrifice her loved child or should she see the life of this innocent man taken? That is the question which confronts this mother and with which she is compelled to wrestle until a decision is reached.

The drama is most absorbing. It is filled with heart-interest. It teems with tense situations and demands all of the emotional and dramatic ability of this wonderful star.

EVERY PART IN BIJOU OFFERING IS WELL TAKEN

The art of dramatics is the correct balancing of laughs and sobs; the arrangement of the opposing emotions so that the sob is almost instantaneously checked by the laugh which follows. Edgar Selwyn, author and playwright of note, has mastered this art and shows it in "The Country Boy," the leading play of the Lytell-Vaughan players at the Bijou theater, which closes with the performance of tonight.

In the title role Bert Lytell proves himself a master of the emotions and is largely responsible for the heavier moments, when the combined heart of the audience goes out to the unfortunate youth who would wrest honor, fame and glory from the big city of New York.

E. D. Hales, one of the most popular members of the Lytell-Vaughan organization, adds new laurels in his masterful presentation of the role of a newspaperman "down on his luck." George Knowlton as the landlady of a cheap New York boarding house provides a major portion of the comedy. In this she is aided and abetted by Henry Shumer, her star boarder; Phillips Tead, a Yiddish member of her "round table"; Jessie Schouler, also a member of the "ragging" family; a showgirl without a job, and William Amstell, as Sam, the colored waiter who is man-of-all-work around the boarding shop.

"The Law of the Land," one of the strongest of the bills in the repertoire of this company, will be the next offering, commencing Thursday evening.

Preparations have been completed by the National City bank of New York to open its first European branch at Genoa, Italy.

Secret societies have been definitely placed under the ban at Barnard college by an election held by the students, the result of which has been made public.

CAMERA CATCHES WILD AUTO FALL

That the career of the motion picture actor does not always lie in pleasant places, in fact, that some miraculous escapes actually occur and become a part of the fiction is proven in the six-part feature, "The Turn of the Road," on the National's program for the latter half of the week, beginning tonight.

There is a scene where John King and Marcia Wilbur, his sweetheart, dash off a cliff in an automobile and go hurtling through the air several hundred feet. In taking the film it was not intended that Joseph Kilgour and Virginia Pearson, the performers, should be in the machine when it took the leap, but they had to ride up to the brink. The plan was to stop the camera, replace the living actors with dummies, and then send the car on over.

But it actually happened that when the car drew up at the edge the earth crumbled and precipitated the machine and its living occupants down the steep declivity. The car slid half way down the embankment, struck a stump, turned a complete somersault and landed right side up in the ravine. Neither the players nor the auto received a scratch, but both Miss Pearson and Kilgour had the scare of their lives.

The two-reef Chaplin farce, "His Trysting Place," which has proven one of the great little film comedians' funniest vehicles, will be shown again tonight and at tomorrow's matinee.

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless) LONDON, Eng., June 7.—Following a conference yesterday afternoon with Premier Asquith, King George issued the following order to the armies of Great Britain on the death of Field Marshal Earl Kitchener of Khartum and Broome:

"Field Marshal Earl Kitchener gave 43 years of distinguished service to the state, and there can be no doubt that it was largely through his genius and tremendous energy that Great Britain has been able to create and place in the field armies which are even now upholding the traditional glories of this Empire."

"Earl Kitchener will be mourned by the army and the nation as a great soldier, who rendered supreme service to his country and who gave that service under conditions of unexampled difficulty."

(Associated Press by Federal Wireless) NEW YORK, N. Y., June 7.—In commenting upon the death of President Yuan Shih-kai at Peking yesterday, S. K. Pond, the local representative of the revolutionary party, declared that it would prove a boon for China.

For this reason I say that his taking off will prove to be one of the greatest possible boons the country could have had."

Rear-Admiral Reports Several Skirmishes With Enemy; No American Casualties

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7.—Rear-Admiral Caperton, commanding the American marines and bluejackets ashore in Haitian ports, reported to the navy department last night that several minor skirmishes have taken place between the Haitian rebels and the Haitian constabulary, the latter aided by the American forces.

In one of the combats at Monte Cristo seven of the rebels were killed in an attack on the marine camp. The fight lasted for some time and the rebels were driven off without difficulty and without a single American casualty.

In company with Haitian gendarmes, a body of marines and sailors attacked an armed force of rebels last Saturday, killing Marcelus and Codio, rebel leaders, and nine of their men. That report does not mention any American casualties.
